ABSTRACT

This update to the bibliographies from Nordicom edited in 1975 and 1976 lists publications on mass communications research from Denmark, Finland, and Norway, that have appeared in one or more of the three languages--English, French, or German. Materials are listed for each country separately, arranged by author (or title if there is no author), and provide complete bibliographic citation. The listings for Norway also include a brief abstract for each entry. A compilation of Swedish research publications appears as an appendix to this volume. (JEG)

Dear reader,

The following list of publications in the field of mass communication is produced through cooperation of Nordicom documentalists. The corresponding list, edited in 1975 and 1976, received more interest than could have been expected, and consequently the decision of a revised and enlarged edition was made. In addition to publications in English, also French and German are included in this list.

Due to the limits of resources for this kind of 'extra' work besides the 'normal' documentation work the level of demands concerning e.g. the typographical make-up can not be one of the highest. Since publishing this kind of lists, however, is and must be one of the basic parts of Nordicom functions, the effort was carried through aware of the minor defects in the final printed form.

The information was collected in September-November 1977, in each country separately. From the very beginning each country was given free hands in the details of the data collected, the main lines being, however, common to all. Due to what is mentioned above of the editorial resources (e.g. typewriting), the data of each country is printed in different typographical form.

However, in spite of the minor technical deviations, the editors wish you'll find this list useful. Also the reader is given a request to bring to editors' attention any comments concerning this list.

FINNISH MASS COMMUNICATION RESEARCH: PUBLICATIONS IN ENGLISH, FRENCH AND GERMAN

Editor's note:

The following list of publications in the field of Finnish mass communication research is cumulatively revised and enlarged from the corresponding list, edited in 1975 and 1976. The collection is completed with new publications, and with publications in the French and German languages.

The original inquiry to the authors contained a request for only the English, French and German publications. The Swedish language (the other native language in Finland) was not seen necessary to be included into this category at that stage. During the editorial work it was found, however, that many works were published also in e.g. Slavic languages, Spanish etc. Referring to the original request it was decided to exclude these works, since it would have been 'unfair' to deviate from the original formulation of the request, which was guiding the answers of the authors. These aspects will be carefully taken into account when editing the next list of this kind, and consequently include all publications in all foreign languages.

Requests for copies of the publications can mainly be addressed to the publishing institution or the author himself/herself. However, all publications can be requested through Nordicom-Tampere, which will forward the request to right hands.

Editor's note:

This is a list of publications in Norwegian mass communication research, published in English or German. It should be noted, however, that mass communication research in Norway has been (and still is) of an essentially national character, and reports are almost exclusively published in Norwegian. This means that the present list of publications does not give a correct impression of the scope and nature of mass communication research in Norway. It is the editor's hope, however, that the list may serve as an introduction to Norwegian research in this field by providing some information on some of the main topics treated.

Bergen, November 1977

AUGEDAL, Egil
"Patterns in mass media use and other activities", Acta Sociologica 15(1972)2, pp. 145-156.

Abs.: On the cumulative effect of leisure time activities.

BERG, Mie
"Public involvement in mass media economy and organization in Norway", Paper, European Consortium for Political Research, Workshop, Strasbourg, March 28-April 2, 1974.

Abs.: A discussion of the amount and nature of public involvement in the Norwegian mass media, and some data on the financial support given by the state to the press, film production and broadcasting.

BERG, Mie; WERNER, Anita
"Mass communication research in Norway", pp. 383-390 in BERG, Mie; e.a. (eds.), Current theories in Scandinavian Mass Communication Research, Grenaa, Denmark, GMT, 1977, ISBN 87-7330-053-5.

Abs.: A general overview of mass communication research in Norway: Organization, scope, research policies.

BRÅTEN, Stein
Communication mechanisms: A synthesizing contribution to the social psychology of interpersonal and mass communication, Solna, Institutet för marknads- och samhällskommunikation, 1970, 64 p., fig. (IMAS Information No. 26E1170).

Abs.: A presentation of a synthetic communication model, which can be evaluated and tested by computer simulation.

BRÅTEN, Stein
Value-discrepant message search as a mode of resolution: A computer simulation exploration of consistency theory, Bergen, University of Bergen, Institute of Psychology, 1974, 32 p., fig. (Reports no. 3, 1974).

Abs.: A consistency theory version in which a state of inconsistency is defined in terms of relations between evaluation held and stored information, is given computer-operational form and made part of a model, subjected to explorative experimentation.

DAHL, Hans Fredrik
"The Scandinavian Broadcasting Monopoly: An economic interpretation", pp. 72-92 in BERG, Mie; e.a. (eds.), Current theories in Scandinavian Mass Communication Research, Grenaa, Denmark, GMT, 1977, ISBN 87-7330-053-5.

Abs.: A discussion of the rationale behind the arrangement of Scandinavian broadcasting as state or near-state monopolies. Claims that the root is a purely economic one, stemming from the broadcasting media as parts of an overall transport and communication structure. As a comprehensive system it cannot be fully realised in private forms, and as a public good it is regarded as improper that private interests should be allowed to benefit from it.

FASTING, Kari
"Research on the sports side", pp. 49-71 in The role of television in promoting the practice of sport. Sport and TV seminar. Report, Oslo-Morgedal-Hovden, September 19-23, 1977.
Oslo, The Norwegian Broadcasting Company, 1977, 117 p.

Abs.: A summary of existing research concerning the inter-relationship between sport and TV. Gives data from different studies, and refers to her own study of the relationships between extent of TV-viewing in general, of consumption of TV sport programmes in particular, and sport interest and active sport participation on the part of the audience.

FLICK, Marjan
Bibliography for women in media research, Bergen, University of Bergen, Department of sociology and political sciences, Center for mass communication research, 1977, 11 p., mimeo.

Note: Prep. for ECPR Joint Sessions, Berlin, March 27-April 2, 1977.

Note: Prep. as paper to the "Women inPolitics" workshop, ECPR Joint Sessions, Berlin, March 27-April 2, 1977.

Abs.: A discussion of relevant background variables and the data that are available for a comparative study of sexrole manifestations in advertising in the Netherlands and Norway. Gives data from a content analysis of advertisements in Dutch magazines.

GALTUNG, Johan; HOLMBOE RUGE, Mari
"The structure of foreign news", Journal of Peace Research 2(1965)1, pp. 64-91.

GIVERHOLT, Helge
News in Norway. Norsk Telegrambyrå (NTB) 1867-1967, Oslo, Norsk Telegrambyrå, 1967, 19 p.

Abs.: English summary of the history of NTB, The Norwegian News Agency.

GLEDITSCH, Nils Petter
Resources and the power to change public opinion: An analysis of some factors in the Norwegian Common Market decision, Oslo, Institute of Peace Research, 30 p., tab., fig., mimeo. (Prio-publications no.29-4)

Abs.: Estimates the distribution of resources between the two sides (in the question of Norway's joining the Common Market), by going through a number of institutions which are normally believed to hold a considerable power over public opinion: The political parties, the ad-hoc organizations, the permanent organizations, the civil service and the ministries, radio, TV, the press. On this basis the implications of the referendum campaign for a democratic theory of Norwegian society is discussed.

GRØNHAUG, Kjell
Advertising and children in a culture without TV-commercials, Bergen, The Norwegian School of Economics and Business Administration, 1974, 38 p., tab., fig., mimeo.

Abs.: A study of children's abilities to identify advertisements, their knowledge of branded merchandise, use of information from advertising and the importance of it for their wanting to buy products. The data are collected through an interview survey among school children in Bergen.

HADDAL, Per
Some aspects of news presentation in Time and Newsweek. A comparison between two American newsmagazines, Oslo, Institute of Press Research, 1968, 53 p., tab. (Stensil No. 3)

Abs.: A comparison between Time and Newsweek as to their organization and presentation of news.

HALSE, Ketil Jarl; EYRE-BROOK, Elizabeth
Images of Youth. Norwegian report, Bergen, University of Bergen, Department of sociology and political sciences, Center for mass communication research, 1977, 29 p., tab., mimeo.

HALSE, Ketil Jarl; EYRE-BROOK, Elizabeth
Presenting TV-programmes for youth: Who, what and why?, Bergen, University of Bergen, Department of sociology and political sciences, Center for mass communication research, 1977, 39 p., mimeo.

Note: Prep. as paper to the Nordic Conference on Mass Communication Research, 3, Orivesi, Finland, 17-20 August, 1977. The paper is based on the Norwegian part of an international project sponsored by Prix Jeunesse, Munich.

Abs.: A descriptive study of 1) the institutional framework of the Children and Youth Department in Norwegian Television, 2) how the producers see their own role and what goals they pursue in the choice of programme content and structure, and 3) their knowledge and ideas on the needs and preferences of their target group. The study is based on extensive interviews with the producers involved and to some extent also participant observation at formal and informal meetings. In addition, some data on the actual content of youth programmes and some background information on career patterns of the producers are given. Finally, the authors discuss the importance of the institutional framework, organizational structure, production ideals and target group feed-back for the resulting programme profile of the department.

HOLST, Jan Erik (ed.)
Norsk filmografi - Norwegian Filmography - 1908-1973, Oslo, The Norwegian Film Institute, 1974, 53 p.

Abs.: A catalogue of all long films produced in Norway from 1908 to 1973. In addition to all-Norwegian productions are registered all co-produced films and a few films which are found in a special Norwegian version. The register is chronological, giving titles, production companies, date of release, directors, photographers, and where the films are preserved, if they are still available. Alphabetic lists of directors, production companies and missing fi .

HØST, Sigurd; OTNES, Berit
Attitudes to Norwegian development assistance 1974, Oslo, Central Bureau of Statistics, Department of Interview Surveys, 1975, 57 p., tab. (Report No. 34)

Abs.: Gives interview data on people's attitudes to Norwegian development assistance, what influences their attitudes, the amount of knowledge about Norwegian official development assistance, to what extent people have received their information through the mass media, and to what extent they have been in contact with the information activities carried out by the Norwegian Agency for International Development itself. The data are compared with data from a previous survey (1972).

HØYER, Svennik
"The political economy of the Norwegian press", Scandinavian Political Studies 3(1968), pp. 85-143, tab.

Abs.: Relates the emergence of a party press and its vitality in Norwegian society to factors of social and political development. Shows how expansion and contraction in the audience-market have affected editorial strategies in the voter-market, and discusses which consequences this may have for future development of the party press.

HØYER, Svennik
"Temporal patterns and political factors in the diffusion of newspaper publishing: The case of Norway", Scandinavian Political Studies 10(1975), pp. 157-172, tab.

Note: Rev. version of a paper presented at the European Consortium for Political Research, Workshop on the Political Role of Mass Media, Strasbourg, 1974.

Abs.: An elaboration of the outline of phase movemnts in the development of national press systems given in earlier papers and articles. Adds some details to the description of phase movements in the development of the national press system in Norway, and shows how the time factor is crucial in explaining the resulting press structure.

HØYER, Svennik; HADENIUS, Stig; WEIBULL, Lennart
The politics and economics of the press: A developmental perspective, London, Sage, 1975, 43 p. (Sage Professional Papers in Contemporary Political Sociology, Series/Number 06-009)

HØYER, Svennik; LORENTZEN, Pål Erik
"The politics of professionalization in Scandinavian journalism", pp. 94-115 in BERG, Mie; e.a. (eds.), Current theories in Scandinavian Mass Communication Research, Grenaa, Denmark, GMT, 1977, ISBN 87-7330-053-5.

Abs.: A discussion of the development of professional institutions in journalism as part of a political development, and the efforts at professionalization of journalism as part of the strains arising primarily from developments within the newspaper industry. Shows how conflicting values are inherent in the journalists' self-perceptions and in their outlook on the proper role of the media in society, clearly demonstrated in two recent surveys of Scandinavian journalists, and that these ambiguities may act as barriers to further professionalization of the group.

KVALHEIM, Arne
News media preferences in Norway, Master thesis, University of Oregon, 1973.

The Norwegian Film Institute, (ed.)
Norwegian films 1971-74, Oslo, 1974, 44 p., ill.

Abs.: A catalogue of Norwegian feature films which had premieres between January 1971 and March 1974, with reviews of content and data of production.

ROKKAN, Stein
"Readers, Viewers, Voters", pp. 417-431 in ROKKAN, Stein, Citizens, elections, parties, Oslo, Universitetsforlaget, 1970.

Note: Reproduction of the author's Granada lecture, given in Guildhall, London, Oct. 1964 (Lond., McGibbon & Kee, 1964).

Abs.: An overview of research on mass communication and political behaviour, concentrating on general problems in the analysis of political campaigns in Western systems of government.

ROKKAN, Stein; TORSVIK, Per
"Der Leser, der Wähler und die Parteipresse", Kölner Zeitschrift für Sociologie und Socialpsychologie 12(1960)2, pp. 278-301, tab.

English transl.: "The Voter, the Reader and the Party Press", pp. 397-416 in ROKKAN, Stein, Citizens, elections, parties, Oslo, Universitetsforlaget, 1970.

Abs.: An analysis of the Norwegian press, its ties with the political parties, its readers and the way they behave at elections. The focus is on the political functions of the press in party systems divided along status lines: the contrast between the voting strength of the "lower-stratum" parties and the dominance of the press of the "higher-stratum" parties in the national readership.

SANDE, Øystein
"The perception of foreign news", Journal of Peace Research 8(1971)3/4, pp. 221-237.

SUNDT MORTENSEN, Mauritz
The impact of research information in Norway. (Incentives and constraints on information-seeking behavior), Master thesis, University of Wisconsin, 1977, 226 p., tab.

Abs.: A descriptive presentation of information-seeking behaviour in the field of research information. The analysis tries to isolate incentives for interest in research, constraints in the acquisition of research information and determinants of attitudes toward research as an activity in society. The study is based on a nation-wide opinion survey, giving background variables as sex, education and sector of occupation. Simple multivariate analysis.

TORSVIK, Per

Abs.: Outlines the development and spread of mass media in Norway. Accounts for what we know about media content, regional differences in the availability of mass media, media personnel, characteristics of readers, listeners and viewers.

TORSVIK, Per
"Television and information", Scandinavian Political Studies 7(1972), pp. 215-234.

Abs.: A study of political information sources with special reference to the role of television. The study is based on surveys done in Northern Norway in connection with the Parliamentary Elections in 1965 and 1969. Television was introduced in this area in the years between, and this presented a unique opportunity to study the importance of television as a political information source.

TSUDA, Ayako
Mediation of sex roles. The case of Norwegian Television: How men and women are presented on Norwegian TV, Oslo, University of Oslo, Institute of Sociology, 1975, 96 p., tab., mimeo.

Abs.: An analysis of a random and systematic sample of programmes in Norwegian television during the period of middle August through November, 1973. The analysis is focussed on how men and women are presented in the programmes, esp. the distribution between the sexes as to the number of participants, length of participation and televised status of the participants.

WERNER, Anita
"Children and television in Norway", Gazette 17(1971)3, pp. 133-151.

Abs.: Discusses the effects of television on leisure time activities of children, school achievement, wishes and plans for the future. The study is based on a two-step survey of children in Finmark, before and after the introduction of television in this area.

Due to unexpected reverses NORDICOM-Sweden has not been able to reach the prolonged editorial dead-line of this list.

Consequently, with the agreement of NORDICOM-Sweden, this list has been printed, and will be distributed, without the Swedish part, which, however, will be produced later as an appendix to this list.

After deciding the deletion of the Swedish part, no corresponding changes in this list have been possible due to the tight schedule of printing.
